How libraries can help – People with dyslexia

Kent Libraries Registration & Archives can give help and support to people with dyslexia in the following ways:

- A library card which allows you to borrow books for six weeks with no late fines. Just ask at any Kent Library for more details
- Audio books including e-books borrowed free of charge. Our eBook provider, Overdrive, now offers a dyslexic friendly font - OpenDyslexic or OpenDyslexic Bold
- Books about dyslexia and books for adults and young people struggling to read
- Free requests: If there is a particular book you want to read or listen to, order it free through any library or online at kent.gov.uk/libs
- Free computer access for two hours every day in any of our libraries. (Under 16s need parental permission to use the internet) with accessibility software to support planning, reading and writing. Book an IT Buddy to help you get on-line
- Free black and white printouts and photocopying, tinted paper available if required – up to 20 pages per session
- Advice and support on obtaining alternative formats for people who find it difficult to access regular print
- Sets of coloured overlays in the main town centre libraries for you to try out
- What do you pay for? Hiring of DVDs and stock requests from outside the county
